

Microsoft Presidio Security Overview

No PII is ever accessible by a third party at any step in the Presidio process. All data is processed locally. The program does not access the internet at any point for any reason.

No PII was used in the making, training, or updating of this edition of Microsoft Presidio. All fine-tuning was performed on published books, academic journal articles, and AI-generated dummy documents designed for the purpose of training.

No PII is contained in this edition of Microsoft Presidio. All analysis of names is done by comparison to either spaCy's `en_core_web_lg`, an open-source natural language database which is never updated with local information and does not connect to the internet, or locally downloaded census data contained in the `gazetteer` folder. Gazetteer is a part of Microsoft Presidio that compares text in a local file (the documents you are reviewing) to a list of names in a separate local file (US census data).

Licensing

Microsoft Presidio is a free and open source program operating under the MIT License, the most permissive open source license that exists. Use of Microsoft Presidio is unrestricted so long as the original copyright notice and a copy of the MIT License is available in any distribution or release containing Presidio code. That license is reproduced here in full.
